

Two flats, R500 apart on paper. R980 apart in reality.

Both are within reach of CRC Johannesburg, both need a Wednesday trip to Wits. Once levies, utilities, gym and Uber fares are counted, Petra Nera comes out R980 a month cheaper — under a thousand rand, and close enough that one unresolved question could still flip it.

HIDDEN COSTS

What neither rent figure includes

Both listings understate. SoHo’s omissions are larger but fully documented. Petra Nera’s utilities are now known — but whether sanitation and refuse are billed on top of them is still an open question, and it is worth more than everything else on this page.

SOHO JUNCTION — CONFIRMED ON THE LISTING
CHARGE	AMOUNT	NOTE
Sanitation / sewerage	R900	Fixed, not usage-based. You pay it even when away.
Refuse & security levy	R500	Fixed body-corporate charge.
Electricity	~R700	Pre-paid, variable. Lower than usual because the geyser sits on the communal account.
Water	~R50	Pre-paid. Genuinely small — but it cuts off with no grace period when the credit runs out.
Added to the advertised R9,500	R2,150	The advert captures 82% of the true housing cost — and 69% once travel is counted

THE BIG ONE

Sanitation and refuse alone come to R1,400 every month — R16,800 a year that the advert never shows. That is close to two months' rent, invisible at first glance. Both are fixed, so there is no way to reduce them by using less.

SOHO JUNCTION – TO CONFIRM BEFORE SIGNING
ITEM	LIKELY COST	WHY IT MATTERS
01 Deposit	R10,000 unfurnished R20,000 semi-furnished	The deposit doubles on the semi-furnished option. Get the interest-bearing account confirmed in writing — required by the Rental Housing Act.
02 Lease initiation / admin fee	R950 – R1,500 once-off	Petra Nera's equivalent is R2,000, so ask early — this could go either way.
03 Credit & background check	R100 – R500 once-off	Sometimes billed per applicant, so twice for the two of you.
04 Meter activation, access tags, remotes	R300 – R800 once-off	Charged per tag. You need two.
05 Annual escalation	6 – 8%	Year-two rent becomes R10,070–R10,260, and the levies escalate too. Get the percentage into the lease.
06 Special levy	Currently R0	The body corporate can raise one at any time. Ask for the last two AGM minutes and the reserve-fund balance.
07 Contents insurance	R150 – R350 monthly	The landlord insures the building, not your possessions.
08 Early-cancellation penalty	up to ~2 months	The CPA gives you 20 business days' notice, but the landlord may charge a "reasonable" penalty. Get it capped.
09 Fibre installation + router	R0 – R1,800 once-off	Often waived on 12 months. The complex is fibre-ready, not fibre-included.

QUALIFYING GATE – SOHO

R33,000 gross monthly minimum income. A hard criterion. Applying jointly means both of you supply six months of payslips, six months of bank statements, ID, current lease, rental invoice and a clear credit record.

TWO MORE CONSTRAINTS – SOHO

Cats only — no dogs. Second-floor unit.

Available 1 October. If your current lease ends off that date, budget for a gap — storage plus temporary accommodation — or an overlap month at roughly R13,800.

PETRA NERA — TWO THINGS TO PRESS ON

The R2,000 admin fee is high. Market rate for a lease initiation fee is R950–R1,500, so this is roughly R500–R1,000 above normal and it is non-refundable. Worth asking what it covers, and whether it is negotiable.

The utilities came in at R1,150, not R800 — R1,000 electricity and R150 water. That is R350 a month more than first quoted, and it checks out: a three-bedroom heating its own water at City Power's 2026/27 rates should land near R1,000, and it is exactly R300 above SoHo's two-bed on a communal geyser. Both figures now corroborate each other. The gap has narrowed from R1,330 to R980.

What is still unknown is sanitation and refuse. SoHo bills these separately at R900 and R500. If Petra Nera does the same, that is up to R1,400 a month on top of the R1,150 — which would make SoHo Junction the cheaper flat outright. This is now the single most valuable question left to ask, and it is worth more than the rent difference, the gym and the Uber fares combined.

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE LEDGER

What SoHo's premium buys

Because you are using Uber rather than a car, the on-site gym is worth considerably more here than it would be otherwise — every trip you don't take is a fare you don't pay.

AMENITIES VALUED AGAINST STANDALONE COST
FACILITY	VALUE IF BOUGHT SEPARATELY
Gym — on site, in the Activity Centre	R650 – R900
Uber fares avoided by the gym being downstairs	R1,170
Sauna and steam room	R200 – R400
Swimming pool , with auto-cleaning equipment	R150 – R300
Business centre — quiet, powered workspace	R300 – R800
24/7 manned guard, CCTV, intercom	R200 – R400
Central geyser , electricity included	R250 – R400
Two parking bays , one covered	R250 – R500
Estimated bundle value	R3,170 – R4,870
What you actually pay for it	R980

WORTH SITTING WITH

On paper the SoHo bundle is worth three to five times the premium you pay for it. That only holds if you use it — but even on the most sceptical reading, counting just the gym, the avoided Uber fares and the pool, you are at roughly R1,970 of value against a R980 premium. The amenities are no longer the weak part of SoHo's case. The bedroom you give up is.

FITNESS

At Petra Nera the gym costs R650 membership plus R1,170 in Uber fares — R1,820 a month to stay fit. At SoHo it is R0 and zero minutes. This is by far the strongest financial argument for SoHo, and it did not exist in the car-based version of this comparison.

WORK & STUDY

The business centre is a real asset for Wits work — quiet, powered, seated, on the property. But note that Petra Nera answers this differently and arguably better: with two of you in a three-bed, the third room becomes a permanent study, always available, no booking.

SECURITY

24/7 manned guard, CCTV and intercom. This matters most on the Wednesday return from Braamfontein, and it is the one benefit that has no equivalent at Petra Nera until you have seen that building's setup in person.

THE QUIET SAVING — NOW CONFIRMED

Water heating is typically 30–40% of a household electricity bill. SoHo's geyser sits on the communal account; Petra Nera's does not. The real figures bear it out almost exactly — R700 at SoHo against R1,000 at Petra Nera, despite Petra Nera being 50% larger. That R300 gap is the communal geyser, and it is a permanent monthly saving that does not appear anywhere in either advert.

TRANSPORT — UBER

The gym trips cancel the church walk

Three days a week to CRC — Monday, Tuesday, Thursday. Wednesday to Wits, with no CRC on campus days. Fares below are the ones you quoted; the gym fare is estimated from the others.

FARES AND MONTHLY UBER SPEND
TRIP	FARE EACH WAY	ROUND TRIPS PER MONTH	A — SOHO	B — PETRA NERA
Home → CRC	R50 (A)	13	R1,300	R0 — walk
Home → Wits Braamfontein	~R95	4.3	R823	R823
Home → Planet Fitness Fourways	~R45 (est.)	13	R0 gym is on site	R1,170
Monthly Uber spend			R2,123	R1,993

THE COUNTER-INTUITIVE RESULT

Walking to CRC saves R1,300 a month — the single biggest line difference anywhere in this comparison. But Ubering to the gym costs R1,170 of it straight back. Net transport difference: R130 a month. Petra Nera’s location advantage is almost entirely spent on getting to a gym that SoHo would have given you for free.

HOW OFTEN YOU GO TO GYM CHANGES THIS

GYM VISITS	B MONTHLY TOTAL	GAP
2× a week	R12,403	R1,370
3× a week	R12,793	R980
4× a week	R13,183	R590
5× a week	R13,573	R200
6× a week	R13,963	−R190

SoHo now draws level at roughly 5.5 gym visits a week, and is cheaper beyond that. On the earlier utility figures the crossover was 6.4 visits and effectively unreachable — it is now well within range if either of you trains seriously.

DISTANCES — CONTEXT ONLY

SoHo → CRC	~5 km
SoHo → Wits	~25 km
Petra Nera → CRC	~500 m — 6 min walk
Petra Nera → Wits	~24 km
Petra Nera → gym	~3.5 km

Because you are using Uber, the fares drive the numbers and these distances are indicative only. They are shown to sense-check the fares, not to compute them.

TIME, NOT MONEY

Local travel comes to roughly 6.5 hours a month at SoHo against 7.3 at Petra Nera — the CRC walk is short, but thirteen gym round trips are not. Wits is near-identical either way at about seven hours a month. On time, this is a wash.

CASH

Moving in, and the first year

CASH NEEDED TO MOVE IN
ITEM	A — SOHO JUNCTION	B — PETRA NERA
Deposit refundable	R10,000 R20,000 if semi-furnished	R9,000 confirmed
First month's rent	R9,500	R9,000
Admin / lease initiation fee	~R1,250 to confirm	R2,000 confirmed — above market
Credit check	~R300	included?
Meter activation, access tags	~R500	~R500

Cash needed	R24,550 – R29,350	R23,850 – R28,650

Move-in cash is essentially the same. Petra Nera's lower deposit and rent are almost exactly offset by its R2,000 admin fee and the gym joining fee — a difference of about R700, which is not a deciding factor either way.

YEAR - ONE TOTAL

Difference over year one		R11,500 · R5,700 each

What would flip this decision

The R980 gap is thin. One unresolved question and one lifestyle choice can each close it on their own — and either would make SoHo Junction the cheaper flat.

SENSITIVITY — EACH SCENARIO APPLIED ON ITS OWN
IF...	B MONTHLY	GAP	VERDICT
Base case — utilities R1,150, gym 3× a week	R12,793	R980	Petra Nera ahead
SoHo's electricity is R900 rather than R700	R12,793	R1,180 A rises to R13,973	Petra Nera further ahead
You go to gym twice a week rather than three times	R12,403	R1,370	Petra Nera furthest ahead
Petra Nera bills sanitation and refuse on top, at R700	R13,493	R280	Effectively a tie
You go to gym 5.5 times a week	~R13,770	~R0	Dead even
You go to gym six times a week	R13,963	−R190	SoHo cheaper
Petra Nera bills sanitation and refuse at SoHo's level, R1,400	R14,193	−R420	SoHo cheaper

ONE QUESTION DECIDES THIS

The utilities are now settled at R1,150. What is not settled is whether Petra Nera bills sanitation and refuse on top, as SoHo does at R900 and R500. Anything above roughly R980 a month on that line and SoHo Junction becomes the cheaper flat. Ask this before anything else — it is worth more than the rent difference, the gym membership and every Uber fare in this document combined.

The honest ledger on each

OPTION A SoHo Junction — R9,500 2 bed / 2 bath / 62 m²	OPTION B Petra Nera — R9,000 3 bed / 2 bath, 14 Riverbend Rd

IN FAVOUR

- The gym costs you nothing to reach. At Petra Nera staying fit runs R1,820 a month once Uber is counted. This is the strongest financial argument for SoHo
- Sauna, steam room and pool on the same terms — zero travel, zero friction
- Business centre — a quiet powered workspace for Wits work, on the property
- Function room for hosting without needing a big flat
- 24/7 guarded security, CCTV and intercom — real value on the Wednesday return from Braamfontein
- Two parking bays included, one covered — worth R250–R500 a month, and useful the moment either of you gets a car
- Central geyser with electricity included — R250–R400 a month back
- North-facing: better light, lower winter heating
- Newer and better presented — nicer to live in, nicer to host in
- Every cost is documented on the listing. You know what you are signing

IN FAVOUR

- Walking distance to CRC — R1,300 a month saved, and the single biggest line difference in the whole comparison
- R980 a month cheaper all-in — R11,760 a year, R490 each
- A third bedroom for two people. A permanent study, always available — which answers SoHo's business centre with something better
- More space, less money
- No transport decision before church. You can be involved in midweek and evening activity without a fare attached to every visit
- Utilities now confirmed at R1,150 — and they corroborate SoHo's estimate rather than contradicting it
- Lower deposit and lower rent
- Available now rather than October, most likely — worth confirming

AGAINST

- R980 a month more — R11,760 a year, R490 each
- R1,400 a month of fixed levies sit outside the advertised rent
- R1,300 a month in Uber fares to CRC that Petra Nera simply does not have
- Pre-paid water and electricity — no grace period, supply cuts when credit runs out
- One fewer bedroom. With two of you, that is the difference between having a study and not
- 62 m² is compact for two people sharing
- Deposit doubles to R20,000 on the semi-furnished option
- R33,000 gross minimum income — a hard gate you both have to clear
- Cats only — no dogs
- The body corporate can raise a special levy at any time
- Only available 1 October — possible gap or overlap month

AGAINST

- Not attractive — and this is where you both live and host every day. Over twelve months that is not a rounding error
- Staying fit costs R1,820 a month — R650 membership plus R1,170 in Uber fares, plus about 4.3 hours of travel
- Utilities came in R350 above the first quote — R1,150, not R800 — which cut the advantage from R1,330 to R980
- Sanitation and refuse are still unaccounted for. SoHo charges R1,400 for these. Anything above R980 here and Petra Nera loses outright
- R2,000 admin fee — roughly R500–R1,000 above market, non-refundable
- No pool, sauna, steam room, business centre or function room
- The gym becomes a decision with a fare attached, every single time. Off-site memberships lapse
- Security arrangements unknown — must be seen and compared against SoHo's 24/7 guard
- Parking allocation unknown
- Walking to CRC after dark needs an honest safety assessment before it counts as a benefit
- Older or less-maintained stock may mean higher niggles-cost — geyser, plumbing, damp

VERDICT

Petra Nera — on a margin now thin enough to be uncomfortable

Petra Nera is R980 a month cheaper — R490 each.
It gives the two of you a third room to use as a study and removes the church commute entirely.
On the numbers as they now stand, it still wins.

But the margin has halved twice. It was R1,672 on a private car with the original utility quote; R1,330 once Uber replaced the car; and R980 now that Petra Nera's real utility bill came in R350 higher. Two forces did that. The gym at Petra Nera costs R1,820 a month once Uber is counted, which cancels almost all of the walking-distance saving. And Petra Nera pays for its own geyser where SoHo does not.

R980 is roughly the value of one unanswered question. If sanitation and refuse are billed on top at Petra Nera the way they are at SoHo, the decision reverses.

THREE QUESTIONS DECIDE IT

- Q1 Does Petra Nera bill sanitation and refuse on top of the R1,150? SoHo charges R900 and R500 for exactly these. Anything above R980 on that line and SoHo Junction is the cheaper flat. Get it in writing before anything else — this single answer outweighs the rent, the gym and every fare in this document.
- Q2 How seriously will you train? At two visits a week Petra Nera is R1,370 ahead. At 5.5 the two are dead even; at six, SoHo is cheaper. That crossover used to be out of reach — it no longer is. If either of you trains properly, SoHo's gym is not a perk, it is a line item worth R1,820 a month.
- Q3 Is R490 each enough to buy the flat you like less? That is what the decision now costs. R490 a month is real money, but it is no longer the kind of gap that settles an argument on its own — and Petra Nera is the plainer place to come home to. Set against it: nothing stands between you and church. No booking, no fare, no waiting. That is the strongest thing Petra Nera has, and it is not on this spreadsheet.

Recommendation: Petra Nera — conditional on confirming in writing that sanitation and refuse are not billed on top, seeing the security setup in person, and walking the Riverbend Road route to CRC after dark yourselves. But this is now a close call rather than a clear one. If that levy question comes back at more than about R980, or if you both intend to train five or six days a week, choose SoHo Junction — on those numbers it is both cheaper and materially better to live in.

Questions to ask each landlord

SOHO JUNCTION

1. Are the R900 sanitation and R500 refuse/security fixed, or do they escalate annually?
2. What is a realistic monthly electricity spend for a two-bed here, given the central geyser? Ask for a current tenant's actual figure.
3. Are both parking bays included at no extra charge, and allocated in the lease?
4. What is the annual escalation percentage, and does it apply to the levies too?
5. Are any special levies planned? Can we see the last two AGM minutes and the reserve-fund balance?
6. What are the Activity Centre, gym and pool hours, and is there any additional access charge?
7. Is the business centre bookable, and is there a fee?
8. What is the deposit interest arrangement, and which account is it held in?
9. What is the total once-off cost — lease admin, credit checks for two, access tags, meter activation?
10. Does the complex have a generator or inverter for load-shedding, and water tanks for Joburg Water outages?

PETRA NERA

1. Are sanitation, sewerage and refuse billed on top of the R1,150, or included? This is the decisive question — SoHo charges R1,400 for these.
2. If they are billed separately, what did they come to last month?
3. Can we see a recent utility bill or statement for the unit, so the R1,150 is confirmed rather than estimated?
4. What does the R2,000 admin fee cover, and is it negotiable? Market rate is R950–R1,500.
5. What is the annual escalation percentage?
6. What is the security setup — guard, access control, CCTV, perimeter?
7. How many parking bays, and are they covered or allocated?
8. Backup power and water storage during load-shedding and municipal outages?
9. Age and condition of the geyser, plumbing and roof — and who pays for repairs?
10. Will the landlord contribute to repainting or basic cosmetic improvement given the condition?
11. What is the exact walking route and distance to the CRC entrance, and is it lit at night?

11. What is the early-cancellation penalty, and can it be capped in writing?
12. Is the R10,000 deposit confirmed for the unfurnished option?

12. When is it available, and is the R9,000 held for a 12-month lease?

METHOD

How the utility figures were checked

WATER — R50 CONFIRMED

Johannesburg Water gives the first 6 kL a month free to residential customers, then charges R16.45/kL from 6 to 10 kL. Two people typically use 6–8 kL, so the metered cost really is in the tens of rands. R50 is right — the earlier R350 estimate was wrong. Watch only for the demand-management levy, which rose to about R108 a month in July 2026 and may sit on the body-corporate account rather than yours.

ELECTRICITY — R120 IS THE FIXED CHARGE, NOT THE BILL

City Power's 2026/27 prepaid residential tariff runs R3.06–R4.37 per kWh, plus roughly R200 a month in fixed charges — a R70 service charge and a R130 network capacity charge. That R130 is almost certainly the R120 figure you had in mind. Actual consumption sits on top of it. A two-person flat uses 300–450 kWh a month; strip out the geyser at 30–40% and SoHo lands around 200–280 kWh, or R650–R900. R700 is used here. Petra Nera's actual R1,000 — a larger flat, heating its own water — sits almost exactly where this model predicts, which is good evidence the R700 estimate for SoHo is sound. Still worth asking the agent for a current tenant's real number.
